

Meet 18 year old Kamila. Residing in Baldia Town with her parents and 6 other siblings, she has been visiting PWA for the past 8 years.

Unfortunately, thalassemia runs in her family as she and her cousin, Seema, both make trips every 14 days to PWA for their transfusion, both very grateful for each other's company. Soft-spoken yet confident, Kamila does not let her ordeal break her spirit and we witnessed that, as she in the midst of a transfusion, proudly showed off her freshly applied Mehndi and told us how her bright coloured clothes and bangles were her mother's doing. With a shy but bright smile, she opened up about her love for spicy food especially chicken and rice and how she loved going out in the rain.

She also expressed her gratitude towards PWA as she knew her father who works with auto spare parts would not have been able to afford her treatment. Kamila is looking forward to a bright future and we, at PWA would love your help in keeping this hope in Kamila as well as the thousands of others like her who suffer from thalassemia.”
